

We like the do not call list as it is. For many of the calls before were just annoying and did not really offer us any better goods or services than we received from our local sources. The worst part was that the calls never come during the main part of the day, for they came at a time when we wanted to relax and be with our family.

Finally most of the time the callers spoke very poor English and were virtually impossible to understand or get them to give up.
